

RISCOS
de Puquillay Alto

Riscos de Puquillay Alto wines are named after the mountain slopes and ridges – "riscos" in Spanish – of the majestic Andes Mountains, an important influence on the geography and terroir of Chile's wine regions, especially the estate vineyards of Luis Felipe Edwards where vines are planted at up to 900 metres in the foothills.

RESERVA

Viognier

TASTING NOTES

Straw yellow color with slight green hues. Nose of medium-high intensity, with notes of fresh white fruit and soft floral aromas. On the palate are fruity notes, with silkiness and freshness. This wine shows a pleasant juiciness that delivers a refreshing balance, with a round finish and long persistence.

FOOD PAIRING

Asian inspired dishes, light fish and chicken, semisoft cheeses.
